Pirates seek more treasure

» Orlando Pirates look a banker bet in the expected R2-million TAB Soccer 10 pool on Saturday when they face Stellenbosch in the MTN8 final at the Mbombela Stadium in a repeat of last year's final, which they won 3-1 in Durban – but it might pay to go wide TAB's Sunday Soccer pools where all eyes will be on the Manchester derby where City and United have both been rather unconvincing.

By Mark Gleeson

Club football returns on the weekend and the biggest question is whether shaken-up Orlando Pirates can put aside the distractions of the last fortnight as they look to defend their MTN8 title. They face Stellenbosch. With their victory last year, they became the first club to win the top eight title three years in a row in the more than 50-year history of the competition, and Pirates can now take that milestone even further. It is also the perfect opportunity for new coach Abdeslam Ouaddou to win over the fans in the way that cup success for his predecessor, José Riveiro, earned the tiny Spaniard the backing of the supporters. Ouaddou, along with defender Thapelo Xoki and goalkeeper coach Tyrone Damons, were injured in a car accident last week and spent a few days in hospital but they have since returned to the training ground. That unfortunate accident proved disruptive to their preparations, as well as the fact that they have had eight players away over the last ten days on international duty. Their international squadron only return today, leaving little time for proper practice ahead of the final. Stellenbosch also gave up a few players to the national team as well as the under-20 side but had the bulk of their squad on hand to drill better for the final. This is the third year in a row that Stellenbosch have reached a cup final, symptomatic of how rapidly the club has grown under the tutelage of Steve Barker. But they might still not have enough firepower against Pirates, who have beaten them in a league match last month in which Stellies were thoroughly outplayed. It should be remembered that Stellenbosch have turned Pirates over a few times previously and are quite capable of beating any side on their day when they put it all together. On the international front, Pep Guardiola and Manchester City are already feeling the heat in the Premier League, and if they lose on Sunday at home to neighbours Manchester United, then it really becomes a crisis for the club. There are, however, few who predict that outcome, although the game could be tight. City lost their last two outings to Brighton and Tottenham, but they did smash Wolves 4-0 away. They'll be looking to bounce back at home, using their attacking flair to break down Man United's defence. United, on the other hand, have been inconsistent, beating Burnley but drawing with Fulham and losing to Arsenal. They'll need to be solid at the back and take their chances if they want to nick a result. A West Ham win over Tottenham on Saturday might be a decent outside bet as beleaguered manager Graham Potter looks to engineer job survival and take Aston Villa and Chelsea for away wins. Real Madrid's 100% start to the new La Liga season comes under scrutiny at Real Sociedad on Saturday in another possible upset.
