Morocco face ferocious semi

» It's another big week for TAB soccer customers - five carryover pools and a guaranteed R17.5-million Soccer 13 at the weekend, plus pools laced with enthralling matches including tonight's AFCON semi-finals followed by Sunday's final and a full round of English Premier League fixtures. Great football, great chances to cash in on your knowledge of the world's most popular sport!

By Mark Gleeson

Hosts Morocco have shown two different faces at the Africa Cup of Nations with some understandably nervous performances before a vivid display of competence to eliminate Cameroon in last weekend's quarter-finals.

It was the clash that South Africa might have played in had they not been beaten by the Indomitable Lions, but watching the way Morocco outmuscled and outworked Cameroon, it's probably just as well Bafana went home when they did.

Now the home team need to do it all over again tonight against Nigeria, who have shown a sudden turn in form that makes their failure to qualify for the World Cup a mystery.

They are the highest-scoring side at the tournament (14 goals) and with Victor Osimhen leading their attack have at their disposal arguably the most dangerous player at the tournament.

It is going to be a ferocious encounter that is hard to call, but with the crowd support behind them Morocco could shade this one.

In the first semi-final earlier tonight, Senegal are fancied over Egypt as former Liverpool teammates Sadio Mane and Mohamed Salah come up against each other again. Senegal's strength is the depth of quality they have on the bench and they boast much more playing flair. Egypt though have shown a mastery of the counter-attack that the West Africans are going to have to be wary of.

But it does look like Sunday's final is going to be the one the form book predicted with top-ranked Morocco up against second-ranked Senegal.

Arsenal's hunt for a first English Premier League title in 22 years continues on Saturday when they go to Nottingham Forest, a team that tends to blow hot and cold, but are a match for most on their day, especially at the City Ground.

The Gunners have won just one of their last five visits there since 2018 and this fixture last year finished 0-0.

Manchester City have drawn their last three EPL games and have fallen six points off the pace in the title race ahead of their local derby against floundering Manchester United in the early match on Saturday.

Old Trafford is the setting and despite City having the greater quality, they have a single win from their last three trips across town and this will be another tough day out.

Liverpool are another who have drawn their last three league games and now sit a massive 14 points behind Arsenal. Securing Champions League football for next season is now their aim, rather than retaining last season's league title.

They host struggling Burnley at Anfield and will expect to win, even in this most turbulent of seasons, although it's worth noting that the Claret's were 1-0 victors at Anfield in 2021.

Aston Villa are on an 11-game winning run at home in all competitions and next to test them is Everton, who have been one of the better performers away this campaign.

But with the Toffees missing so many first-team players through injury, suspension and AFCON duty, Villa look a home banker to win in your TAB soccer bets.

WIN BIG FOR R2!

Sat 17 Jan - S10 V2
