2 to go for Pirates and Arsenal

» A R6.6-million Soccer 13 carryover set to generate a total pool of R20 million and four cash-boosted pools offer great opportunities to land a big payout on another weekend of pulsating football that includes the FA Cup final, the first leg of the African Champions League final and a host of critical league clashes including a must-win contest for title-chasing Orlando Pirates.

By Mark Gleeson

Orlando Pirates are tantalisingly just two games away from ending Mamelodi Sundowns' long-standing reign as South African champions, while Arsenal are on the brink of ending their long league championship drought in England.

But for both clubs, there is still work to do before they can reach the long-sought-after promised land. Pirates have not won a title since 2012, while Arsenal's last English Premier League title came in the Arsene Wenger wonder era, 22 years ago.

Pirates know what their target is after Sundowns completed their league programme at TS Galaxy last night, but that had been clear from last week already.

The Buccaneers must beat Durban City at home on Saturday and then repeat the feat on 24 May when the league season concludes. Pirates will be away at relegation-haunted Orbit College in their final league fixture.

Sundowns' failure in recent weeks to win at home against Stellenbosch and Kaizer Chiefs, plus a goalless draw at Richards Bay, has probably proved their undoing. They have had to deal with a heavy schedule because of their progress to the African Champions League final and have failed to cope despite an extensive squad.

Sundowns host Morocco's Royal Armed Forces in the first leg at Loftus Versfeld on Sunday, seeking to take an advantage to the return leg in Rabat on May 24.

But they are going to have to be at their attacking best because the Moroccans will come to defend and keep a clean sheet, while looking for counter-attack chances and a potentially valuable away goal.

Sundowns are the fancied side for the final, but that was also the case last season when they surprisingly lost to Pyramids of Egypt over the two legs.

Arsenal have two league fixtures left before they meet Paris Saint-Germain in the UEFA Champions League final on 30 May. They lead Manchester City in the EPL table by five points, although that advantage will reduce to two if Pep Guardiola's men win tonight's catch-up game against Crystal Palace.

But for a fortunate VRA decision against West Ham last weekend, Arsenal and City might have been neck and neck going into the penultimate set of EPL matches, which will be played early next week.

Arsenal must be heavily fancied to beat already-relegated Burnley at home on Monday. City will travel to Bournemouth on Tuesday, only three days after the FA Cup final against Chelsea, and it could be that fatigue from the final costs City against Bournemouth and allows Arsenal to secure the championship before the final weekend of fixtures on Sunday 24 May.

Arsenal have to guard against the nerves, however, with many expecting still waiting for them to stumble. But that will surely not happen against Burnley.

As for the FA Cup final, City are clear favourites as Chelsea seek to salvage something from another wretched season.

They have faced each other twice before in FA Cup finals. Chelsea won the first encounter 1-0 in 1970 and City gained revenge with a 1-0 win of their own in 2021. Both finals were tight, low-scoring affairs, a pattern that could well repeat itself at Wembley this Saturday.
